Text, despite its apparent simplicity, can be incredibly difficult to write in such a way that the reader, first, understands your idea, and secondly, is penetrated by it. After all, the main role of the text is to convey information to the consumer. That is why it is necessary to approach the issue of writing different types of texts: sales, informational, entertainment, etc. with a full understanding of the answers to the following questions:

- What do I want my reader to understand?
- What do I want my reader to do after reading?
- What reaction should my reader have during the reading and afterwards?
- Only by answering these questions can you sit down at your desk, grab a pen and paper, or, much closer to us, a mouse and keyboard, and start writing.

The body of the text

It's simple: you state your thoughts about the topic of your text. But, even in this simplicity, there are pitfalls. Let's talk about them:

1) Be sure to divide the text into paragraphs.

Each paragraph - this is some semantic part, a brick of your text, which forms the whole picture. Text without paragraphs, of course, can be read, but it requires an incredible amount of effort to concentrate. And since the reader is already satiated with texts, he will give up reading your text and find something simpler.

2) Use as simple sentences as possible.

Uninterested person incredibly difficult to understand the intricacies of your turns of phrase, introductory words and sentences. If you think that thus emphasize their reading and ability to operate complex sentences, then we dare you sad - you are mistaken. Keep it simple, keep it simple, and keep it simple.

Avoid such dangerous words: the most, the best, etc.

They, of course, increase the speech and emotional impact on the reader. But in the text, everything needs to be confirmed. And even if you say that red is the most fashionable color of the season, then bother to provide solid evidence for your words, and if you can not, then refuse such a construction.

4. use words that are familiar to your reader.

It's not necessary to cram it with complicated vocabulary, terms, acronyms and foreign words. You can do this, but only if he is ready, that is, has all the knowledge, skills and experience necessary to understand the whole text. So after you have written the text, test it on someone who is not aware of the subject of your text. And if he or she understands everything, then you can safely publish your work, but if not, you need to edit.
